

“Timon of Athens”
Tuesday 16th to Thursday 18th March and Saturday 20th March

A promenade production of this early 17th century play by Shakespeare and Thomas Middleton will be performed later this term by Bootham students in and around the school and its grounds – the audience accompanying the action as it moves from scene to scene, and from one location to another.

There will be four performances in total – Tuesday 16th, Wednesday 17th and Thursday 18th March at 6:30pm, and a matinee performance at 2pm on Saturday 20th March. Because of the nature of the production, audience size will be limited to forty for each performance. Details of how to book tickets (which will go on sale after the half-term break) will be announced shortly.
